Studies in Urban Systems Dynamics

Series Editors: Gregory M. Fulkerson and Alexander R. Thomas (SUNY Oneonta)

This series focuses attention on understanding theoretically and historically the development and maintenance of urban systems through a demographic ecological perspective. It seeks a blending or reintegration of the urban, rural, world-systems, and environmental research literatures under a comprehensive theoretical paradigm. As such, we further specify Urban System Dynamics as analysis of human population distribution on social variables, including politics, economics, and culture.

Critical Africana Studies

Series Editor: Reiland Rabaka (University of Colorado at Boulder)

The series features scholarship within the emerging field of Africana studies, which encompasses African studies, African diasporan studies, African American studies, Afro-American studies, Afro-Asian studies, Afro-European studies, Afro-Islamic studies, Afro-Jewish studies, Afro-Latino studies, Afro-Native American studies, Caribbean studies, Pan-African studies, Black British studies and, of course, Black studies. Over the last fifty years, epistemological and methodological advances in Africana studies, as well as historical and cultural changes, have led to an increased interest in continental and diasporan African history, culture, thought, and struggles. The Critical Africana Studies book series directly responds to the heightened demand for monographs and edited volumes that innovatively explore Africa and its diaspora employing cutting-edge critical, interdisciplinary, and intersectional theory and methods.

Critical Animal Studies

Series Editor: Anthony J. Nocella (Hamline University)

Titles in the series address human relations with other animals in the context of socio-political relations and economic systems of power. Rooted in critical theory as well as the animal advocacy movement, the series argues for an interdisciplinary approach to understanding our relationships with nonhuman animals. Rejecting the notion that nonhuman animals do not have a voice, the series stresses that nonhuman animals do have agency, and, thus argues for an animal standpoint. The series encourages progressive and committed scholarship and sees exploitation of nonhuman animals as interrelated with oppression based on class, gender and racism. This series inspires engaged critical praxis, promotes liberation of all animals, and challenges all systems of domination.

Comparative Urban Studies

Series Editor: Kenneth R. Hall (Ball State University)

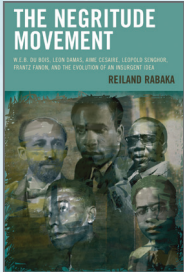

The series encourages innovative studies of urbanism, contemporary and historical, from a multidisciplinary (e.g., architecture, art, anthropology, culture, economics, history, literature, sociology, technological), comparative, and/or global perspective. The series invites submissions by scholars from the fields of American studies, history, sociology, women's studies, ethnic studies, urban planning, material culture, literature, demography, museum studies, historic preservation, architecture, journalism, anthropology, and political science. New studies will consider how particular pre-modern and modern settings shaped urban experience and how modern and pre-modern, Western, and non-Western cities responded to broad social and economic changes.

The Negritude Movement

W.E.B. Du Bois, Leon Damas, Aime Cesaire, Leopold Senghor, Frantz Fanon, and the Evolution of an Insurgent Idea

By Reiland Rabaka, University of Colorado, Boulder

"Working critically across the New Negro Movement and the Harlem Renaissance to these major thinkers, Rabaka brilliantly reexamines the legacies of the Negritude Movement. His detailed analysis clarifies the trajectories between intellectual and political traditions of Africa and its diaspora. The Negritude Movement is an essential contribution to the twenty-first century, reinvigorating our interests in reading these greats with new light."

Facing South to Africa

Toward an Afrocentric Critical Orientation

By Molefi Kete Asante, Temple University

"Gearing his book primarily to scholars of Afrocentricity theory, Asante, the architect of Afrocentricity, provides perspectives on numerous topics and theories through the Afrocentric lens. He briefly explains Afrocentricity's position on theories, from structuralism and postmodernism to negritude, Africology, and kawaida (a theory proposed by Maulana Karenga in the 1970s). Asante also looks at immigration, identity, black education, a united Africa, and the various conflicts impacting Africa today." —CHOICE

Frantz Fanon, My Brother

Doctor, Playwright, Revolutionary

By Joby Fanon

Translated by Daniel Nethery

"This is an engaging and personal volume, which brings Fanon alive as a thinker, a humanist, and a man of action. As Fanon's closest brother, Joby is an essential interlocutor and has been a source for all of Fanon's biographers, but here he also wants to set the record straight. As well as a portrait of family life in Martinique, the biography includes illuminating and important family letters and summaries of Fanon's plays."

Concepts of Cabralism

Amilcar Cabral and Africana Critical Theory

By Reiland Rabaka, University of Colorado, Boulder

"Concepts of Cabralism fills a lacuna in the black studies archive. It demands that Amilcar Cabral no longer be a footnote in the scholarship on the black radical tradition. Rabaka clearly and cogently provides a valuable matrix to understand Cabral in relation to other great Africana thinkers. He illustrates that Cabral's ideas are not dead, but of extreme contemporary import."

Frantz Fanon and the Future of Cultural Politics

Finding Something Different

By Anthony C. Alessandrini, Kingsborough Community College

"Alessandrini's book proves to be a good guide to Fanon's writings and their contemporary relevance for scholars from Middle Eastern studies to Continental philosophy and contemporary theory. His theoretical engagements with contemporary theorists alone make the book a worthy read, but what really makes this book distinctive is the emphasis on the continued practical import of Fanon's writings as provocations for us today."

The Hip Hop Movement

From R&B and the Civil Rights Movement to Rap and the Hip Hop Generation

By Reiland Rabaka, University of Colorado, Boulder

"Rabaka begins by arguing the existence of a hip-hop movement, and defining its parameters and identifying the hip-hop generation. He examines hip-hop's links to other music genres (rhythm and blues, rock 'n' roll, soul, and funk), as well as to black political movements. The author provides a rich look at the evolutions of these music genres and then their impacts on hip-hop.... Recommended." —CHOICE

Life in a Black Community

Striving for Equal Citizenship in Annapolis, Maryland, 1902–1952

By Hannah Jopling, Fordham University

"Here is the invisible third of Annapolis. Here is the African America that made the city. It is never seen by historians or preservationists because it is not in official records or great buildings, but is in the ordinary: newspapers and in the ground as archaeology. This is the third that has been regarded as disposable along with the ground where it is buried and in the newspapers discarded."

Tax Law and Racial Economic Justice

Black Tax

By Andre L. Smith, Widener University

"Andre Smith demonstrates the crucial role unfair taxation practices have played from the American colonial period onward in establishing and maintaining white Americans' illicit material advantage. Traveling Texts and the Work of Afro-Japanese Cultural Production

Two Haiku and a Microphone

Edited by William H. Bridges IV, St. Olaf College, and Nina Cornyetz, Gallatin School for Individualized Study

"This is the best book published to date on Afro-Japanese hybridity. It brims with critical insights into a history of collaboration, exchange, borrowing, and homage perfectly pitched to its subject. From Amiri Baraka's 'low coup' poems to Japanese rastafari, the book listens in on a noisy creolization across the Black Pacific." —Bill V. Mullen, Purdue University

Black Muslims and the Law

Civil Liberties from Elijah Muhammad to Muhammad Ali

By Malachi D. Crawford, University of Houston

"Fresh, focused, well researched, and engaging, Crawford makes a significant contribution to African American social, religious, and legal history by offering a nuanced examination of the Nation of Islam's initially reluctant but ultimately effective use of the American legal system in its extended quest for social legitimacy as a religious institution. Crawford deepens our understanding of the NOI's quest for social acceptability and justice."

African Americans and Mass Media

A Case for Diversity in Media Ownership

By Richard T. Craig, George Mason University

"Richard Craig's work exposes how monopolistic forces, with complicity of the Federal Communications Commission, have virtually abandoned the egalitarian notion that America's public communications media should serve diverse cultural groups. His case study of BET reveals what can happen when capitalistic interests bring bottom line priorities to programming of a formerly minority owned media enterprise."

A Nation Can Rise No Higher Than Its Women

African American Muslim Women in the Movement for Black Self-Determination, 1950–1975

By Bayyinah S. Jeffries, Eastern Washington University

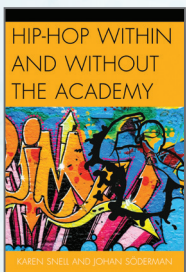

"Jeffries's account provides insight into the experiences of African American Muslim women and their contributions to the Nation of Islam. In this much-needed treatment, Jeffries reveals much about the women, and their communities. Using an array of published sources and oral histories, he explores motivations for joining the nation, how they crafted their identities, and ways in which they embraced the movement for self-determination. Hip-Hop within and without the Academy

By Karen Snell, Boston University, and Johan Söderman, Malmö University

"Snell and Söderman explore how hip-hop music has come to be used 'by artists to articulate their sense of marginality.' The music has become the chosen mode of expression for young people who have experienced a sense of exclusion or disenfranchisement....The authors explore efforts to add courses on hip-hop to college curricula and to music education coursework in secondary schools. Second-Generation Korean Americans and Transnational Media

Diasporic Identifications

By David C. Oh, Ramapo College

This book looks at the relationship between second-generation Korean Americans and their uses and interpretations of Korean films and popular culture. The book combines intrapersonal processes of identification with their social identities to understand how they use Korean popular culture to define "authenticity" and to construct inter-group and intragroup difference and hierarchy.

Younger-Generation Korean Experiences in the United States

Personal Narratives on Ethnic and Racial Identities

Edited by Pyong Gap Min, Queens College, and Thomas Chung, Independent Scholar

The essays reflect certain major changes between the two cohorts of Korean Americans—the first growing up in the 1960s and early 1970s and the second growing up during the 1980s and early 1990s—and proves how an increase in the Korean population and in the number of ethnic organizations helped the second-cohort Korean Americans retain their cultural heritage in a more voluntary, and therefore meaningful, way.

Experiences of Japanese American Women during and after World War II

Living in Internment Camps and Rebuilding Life Afterwards

By Precious Yamaguchi, Southern Oregon University

This book examines the experiences of Japanese American women who were in internment camps during World War II and after. Using evidence from primary sources as well as over seven years of interviews with sixteen women, Yamaguchi provides a feminist, intergenerational, and historical study of how unequal the justice system has been to this group of people and how it has affected their quality of life, sense of identity, and relationship with future generations.

Oral and Literary Continuities in Modern Tibetan Literature

The Inescapable Nation

By Lama Jabb, Oxford University

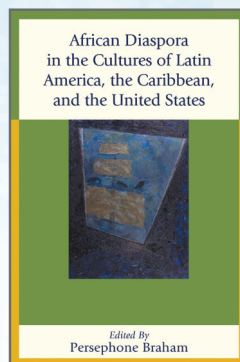

This is the first book-length study to appear in English on the literary, cultural, and political roots of modern Tibetan literature. This study explores the endurance of genres, styles, concepts, techniques, symbolisms, and idioms derived from Tibet's rich and diverse oral art forms and textual traditions. It reveals how Tibetan kāya poetics, the mgur genre, life-writing, the Gesar epic, and other modes of oral and literary compositions are referenced and adapted in novel ways within modern Tibetan poetry and fiction.

African Diaspora in the Cultures of Latin America, the Caribbean, and the United States

Edited by Persephone Braham, University of Delaware

Scholars of African Americas are sometimes segregated from one another by region or period, by language, or by discipline. Bringing together essays on fashion, the visual arts, film, literature, and history, this volume shows how our understanding of the African diaspora in the Americas can be enriched by crossing disciplinary boundaries to recontextualize images, words, and thoughts as part of a much greater whole.

Global Tangos

Travels in the Transnational Imaginary

By Melissa A. Fitch, University of Arizona

Global Tangos argues against the hackneyed rose-in-mouth clichés of Argentine tango, demonstrating how the dance may be used as a way to understand transformations around the world that have taken place as a result of two defining features of globalization: transnationalism and the rise of social media. Global Tangos demonstrates the cultural impact of Argentine tango in the world by assembling an unusual array of cultural narratives created in almost thirty countries, all of which show how tango has mixed and mingled in the global imaginary, sometimes in wildly unexpected forms.

Malaysia in the World Economy (1824–2011)

Capitalism, Ethnic Divisions, and “Managed” Democracy

By Azlan Tajuddin, La Roche College

Does the industrial development of a country entail the democratization of its political system? Malaysia in the World Economy examines this theme with regards to Malaysia in the period between 1824 and 2011.

Unlike other past research, Malaysia in the World Economy combines both macro- and micro-theoretical approaches in critically analyzing the relationship between capitalist development and democratization in Malaysia within a comparative-historical and world-systemic context.

Latinos and the Voting Rights Act

The Search for Racial Purpose

By Henry Flores, St. Mary's University

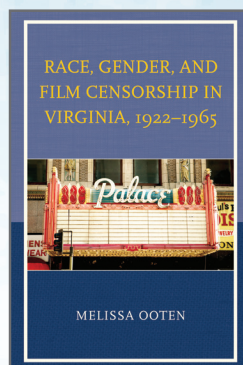

This volume explores the role race and racism played in the Texas redistricting process and the creation and passage of the state's Voter Identification Law in 2011. The author brings together scholarly research and the analysis of significant Supreme Court decisions focusing on race to discuss Texas' election policy process. This is the first book that speaks specifically to the effects of electoral politics and Latinos.

Race, Gender, and Film Censorship in Virginia, 1922–1965

By Melissa Ooten, University of Richmond

This book chronicles the history of movie censorship in Virginia from the 1920s to the 1960s. It uses the contestations surrounding film censorship as a framework for a full understanding the dominant political, economic, and cultural hierarchies that structured Virginia and much of the New South in the mid-twentieth century and ways in which citizens contested these prevailing structures.

Unveiling Whiteness in the Twenty-First Century

Global Manifestations, Transdisciplinary Interventions

Edited by Veronica Watson, Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Deirdre Howard-Wagner, Independent Scholar, and Lisa Spanierman, Arizona State University

This book is a tightly interconnected and richly collaborative book that advances our understanding of why it is so difficult to reform and reimagine whiteness in the twenty-first century. Contributors demonstrate that complex inquiry and activism are needed to challenge new iterations of whiteness in twenty-first-century political and social spaces.

A Realist Metaphysics of Race

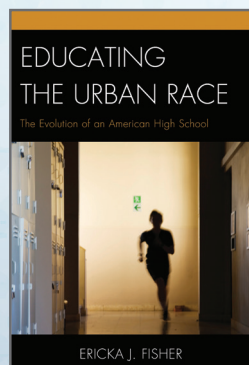

A Context-Sensitive, Short-Term Retentionist, Long-Term Revisionist Approach

By Jeremy Pierce, Le Moyne College

In this book, Pierce defends a social-kind view of racial categories. On this view, the biological features we use to classify people racially do not make races natural kinds. Rather, races exist because of contingent social practices, single out certain groups of people as races, give them social importance, and allow us to name them as races.

Educating the Urban Race

The Evolution of an American High School

By Ericka J. Fisher, Holy Cross

The urban student has indeed been bastardized in America. The constructs of race/ethnicity, socioeconomic status, and social capital combine to oppress the urban student. This text takes the suggestion that urban has become inextricably linked to race one step further and proposes that it has become a socially constructed category in its own right that serves to disempower all those who self-identify or are labeled as such.

White Self-Criticality beyond Anti-racism

How Does It Feel to Be a White Problem?

Edited by George Yancy, Duquesne University

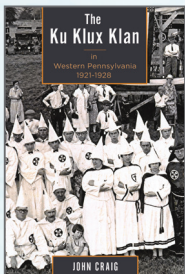

"This book addresses a question to white academics who are antiracist scholars: 'how does it feel to be a white problem?' This volume is unique in not only accounting for whiteness generically, but also treating whiteness as a problem—something to be named and diagnosed as a fundamental stumbling block for racial justice. Highly recommended." —CHOICE

The Ku Klux Klan in Western Pennsylvania, 1921–1928

By John Craig, Slippery Rock University

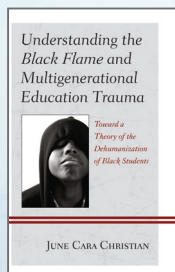

"Craig provides an in-depth analysis of the rise and fall of the 1920s Ku Klux Klan in western Pennsylvania. Supported by an exhaustive list of sources, the author persuasively shows that the Klan was extremely active in the area. . . . He also provides a glimpse of the women of the Ku Klux Klan and their agreements and conflicts with their male counterparts. Highly recommended." —CHOICE

Understanding the Black Flame and Multigenerational Education Trauma

Toward a Theory of the Dehumanization of Black Students

By June Cara Christian, University of Missouri, St. Louis

Using Africana critical theory as a critical framework to analyze W. E. B. Du Bois's Black Flame trilogy, this study establishes a transdisciplinary theory of the dehumanization of Black students in the United States. As lenses of analysis, critical race theory and Post Traumatic Slave Syndrome reveal how the processes of racialization, colonization, and globalization contribute to the multigenerational traumas many Blacks have experienced in education since Reconstruction.

Community Action against Racism in West Las Vegas

The F Street Wall and the Women Who Brought It Down

By Robert J. McKee, University of Nevada, Las Vegas

This book chronicles McKee's participation in a successful protest, led primarily by black females in the historically African American community of West Las Vegas, Nevada, from 2008–2013. The residents protested the closure of a main street (F Street) in their community for the expansion of Interstate 15. The community felt the street closure was racially motivated, with the intent of further isolating this already marginalized community.

The Polish Orthodox Church in the Twentieth Century and Beyond

Prisoner of History

By Edward D. Wynot Jr., Florida State University

This book shows the adaptability of an Orthodox community whose members are a religious and ethnic minority in a predominantly Roman Catholic country populated by ethnic Poles. It features a triangular relationship among the Orthodox and Catholic hierarchies and the secular state of Poland throughout the changes of government. A secondary interrelationship involves the tense relationship between ethnic Poles on one hand, and minority Ukrainians and Belarusians on the other.

Edited by Sheena C. Howard, Rider University

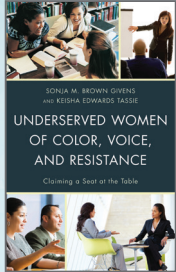

This book engages scholarly essays, poems, and creative writings that examine the meanings of race, gender, and sexual orientation as interlocking systems of oppression. Each chapter in this volume critically, yet creatively, interrogates the notion of identity as socially constructed, yet interconnected and shaped by cultural associations, expanding on the idea that we as individuals live in an identity matrix—our self-concept, experiences, and interpretations originate or are developed from the culture in which we are embedded.

By Zulfia Tursunova, University of Manitoba

Women in Uzbekistan have been labeled as victims of patriarchy and submissive, voiceless bodies who lack agency and decision-making power. Tursunova presents women's voices and their experiences of carrying out livelihood activities such as farming, trading, baking, sewing, building greenhouses, and establishing furniture workshops.

Same-Sex Marriage, Context, and Lesbian Identity

Wedded but Not Always a Wife

By Julie Whitlow and Patricia Ould

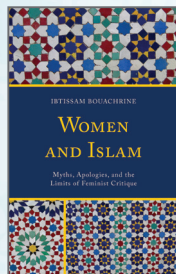

Via rich anecdotes of how married lesbians navigate the social sphere through their varied use or avoidance of the use of the term wife, this volume provides groundbreaking insights into how social change is being constructed and made sense of through an examination of real-life interactions with family and friends, on the job, and across service and casual encounters.

Women and Islam

Myths, Apologies, and the Limits of Feminist Critique

By Ibtissam Bouachrine, Smith College

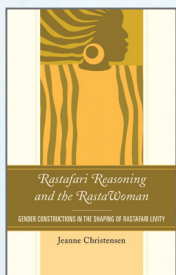

Too few scholars are willing to tell the complicated, and at times harrowing, stories of Muslim women's lives. Bouachrine radically rethinks the celebratory discourse constructed around Muslim women's resistance. It shows instead the limits of such resistance and the restricted agency given women within Islamic societies.

Rastafari Reasoning and the Rasta Woman

Gender Constructions in the Shaping of Rastafari Livy

By Jeanne Christensen, University of Colorado, Boulder

This book examines the complex ways that gender and race shaped a liberation movement propelled by the Caribbean evolution of an African spiritual ethos. Christensen proposes that Rastafari represents the most recent reworking of this spiritual ethos, referred to as African religiosity. The book contributes a new perspective to the literature on Rastafari, and through a historical lens, corrects the predominant static view of Rastafari women.

Dialogues across Diasporas

Women Writers, Scholars, and Activists of Africana and Latina Descent in Conversation

Edited by Marion Rohrleitner, University of Texas, El Paso, and Sarah E. Ryan, Independent Scholar

This work focuses on the shared historical legacies of members of the Africana and Latina diasporas, and the cultural impact of the African diaspora in the Americas. This book seeks to emphasize connections rather than divisions among different migratory ethnic communities via a reconfiguration of borders and ethnic identities.

Cyberculture and the Subaltern

Weavings of the Virtual and Real

Edited by Radhika Gajjala, Bowling Green State University

Gajjala maps how voice and silence shape online space in relation to offline actualities, weaving the virtual and real in relation to so-called old and new technologies using globalization and technology as the frame for examination. Through actual auto-ethnographic engagement, Gajjala reveals the interdependence of the economic, political, cultural, and social in the production of the subaltern online.

Cartographies of Transnationalism in Postcolonial Feminisms

Geography, Culture, Identity, Politics

By Jamil Khader, Stetson University

This book proffers a new theory of the radical possibilities of contemporary postcolonial feminist writings from Africa, the Middle East, the Americas, and the Caribbean, against what can be described as "actually-existing colonialisms." These writers include prominent and other less-known postcolonial women writers such as Tsitsi Dangaremba, Louise Erdrich, Aurora Levins Morales, Rosario Morales, Esmeralda Santiago, Raymonda Tawil, Michelle Cliff, and Rigoberta Menchú.

Mentoring Away the Glass Ceiling in Academia

A Cultured Critique

Edited by Brenda Marina, Georgia Southern University

Mentoring Away the Glass Ceiling in Academia is different in that it calls attention to the role mentoring has played on the “glass ceiling” phenomenon in higher education. Narratives by and about the experiences of women of diverse backgrounds in the United States and beyond the borders of this nation shed needed light on the ways in which mentoring influences identity formation and internal coping mechanisms in environments often characterized by marginalization.

Identities on the Move

Contemporary Representations of New Sexualities and Gender Identities

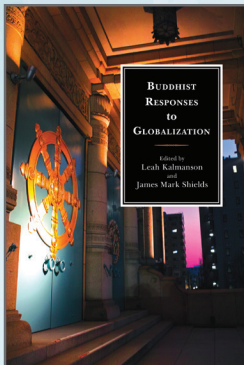

Edited by Silvia Pilar Castro-Borrego and Maria Isabel Romero-Ruiz, both, University of Málaga

This book questions the postmodernist concept of identity by looking into more progressive views of identity and difference addressing post-positivist interpretations of key identity markers such as sex, gender, race, and agency. The authors include the views and concerns of people of color, of women in the diaspora, in our evermore multiethnic and multicultural societies, and their representation in the media, films, popular culture, subcultures, and the arts.

Sexual Deceit

The Ethics of Passing

By Kelby Harrison, Independent Scholar

Sexual Deceit is an extended ethical analysis of the phenomenon of sexual identity passing—i.e. socially presenting as X, when one understands oneself as Y, where the variables represent any contemporary sexual identity—alongside identity passing in the contexts of race, gender, and briefly, religion, and class. Tracing the intervention of social construction theory on contemporary political understandings of LGBT communities and activism, Harrison argues against social construction models of identity.

The Politics of State Intervention

Gender Politics in Pakistan, Afghanistan, and Iran

By Shireen Burki, Independent Scholar

"Burki, 'a female of Pushtun and Irish heritage who grew up in Pakistan,' compares the status of women in her home country with their status in the neighboring Muslim-majority countries of Afghanistan and Iran. She discovers many similarities but concludes that the Pakistani judiciary offers slightly better safeguards for women against the tide of misogynist 'Shariahization' that has swept across all three countries, beginning with Pakistan in the 1970s. Non-Violence

A History Beyond the Myth

By Domenico Losurdo, University of Urbino

This book tells a fascinating history: from the American Christian organizations in the first decades of the nineteenth century who wanted to eliminate slavery and war in a non-violent way, to the protagonists of movements—Thoreau, Tolstoy, Gandhi, Capitini, M. L. King, the Dalai Lama—who either for idealism or for political calculation flew the flag of non-violence, up to the leaders of today's "color revolutions."

Gender-Based Perspectives on Batterer Programs

Program Leaders on History, Approach, Research, and Development

By Edward W. Gondolf, University of Pennsylvania

This book responds to the intense debate about the approach and effectiveness of batterer programs, especially in light of the “evidence-based practice” movement. But it does so through a collection of twenty-four interviews with batterer program founders and leaders who have been working in the field for twenty-five to thirty-five years. In the process, it answers many of the misconceptions and misrepresentations of batterer programs, and highlights their contributions and development.

Rethinking Prison Reentry

Transforming Humiliation into Humility

By Tony Gaskew, University of Pittsburgh, Bradford

“‘Black bodies, white justice’ is just one proposition calling for rethinking raised in this provocative book. . . . The author’s argument might be summarized as follows: whites are numerically the greatest criminal offenders, whereas blacks disproportionately offend and are incarcerated. Black crime causation initially stems from slavery, then from Jim Crow policies, and most recently from racism, thanks to white privilege. . . . This is a timely, fact-filled stem-winder. Essential.”

Access to Inequality

Reconsidering Class, Knowledge, and Capital in Higher Education

By Amy E. Stich, University at Buffalo

Drawing upon the author's year-long qualitative research study within one “democratized” institution of higher education and its associated art museum, Access to Inequality explores the vestiges of an exclusionary history within higher education and the art world—two related contexts that have arguably failed to adequately respond to the public's call to democratize.

Religion, Flesh, and Blood

The Convergence of HIV/AIDS, Black Sexual Expression, and Therapeutic Religion

By Pamela Leong, Salem State University

This is a case study of one congregation within the Unity Fellowship Church Movement that relies on therapeutic religion, a form of religion that strives to equip individuals with psychological capital, by enabling self-expressions and affirmations of social differences. For religious organizations serving traumatized and marginalized populations in particular, therapeutic religion may be pivotal in helping to reintegrate the wounded back into the community folds.

The Crisis of the Holy

Challenges and Transformations in World Religions

Edited by Alon Goshen-Gottstein, Elijah Interfaith Institute

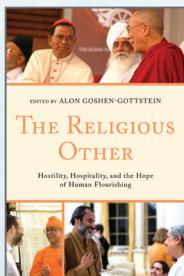

This volume explores the contours of pressures, changes, and transformations, and reflects on how our religions are changing under the common pressures of recent decades. By identifying commonalities across religions as they respond to these pressures, it suggests how religious traditions might cope with these changes and how they might join forces in doing so.

The Religious Other

Hostility, Hospitality, and the Hope of Human Flourishing

Edited by Alon Goshen-Gottstein, Elijah Interfaith Institute

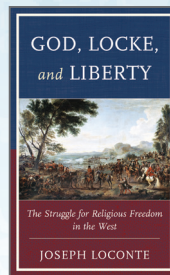

One of the biggest challenges for relations between religions is the view of the religious Other. The question touches the roots of our theological views. The Religious Other explores the views of multiple religious traditions on how to regard otherness. By including perspectives of Abrahamic and non-Abrahamic traditions, it approaches these challenges from multiple perspectives, highlighting commonalities in approach and ways in which one tradition might inspire another.

God, Locke, and Liberty

The Struggle for Religious Freedom in the West

By Joseph Loconte, The King's College

John Locke's A Letter Concerning Toleration (1689), was arguably the most important defense of religious freedom in the Western tradition. In God, Locke, and Liberty: The Struggle for Religious Freedom in the West, historian Joseph Loconte offers a groundbreaking study of Locke's Letter, challenging the notion that decisive arguments for freedom of conscience appeared only after the onset of the secular Enlightenment.

Getting the Holy Ghost

Urban Ethnography in a Brooklyn Pentecostal Tongue-Speaking Church

By Peter Marina, University of Missouri, St. Louis

"This four-year ethnographic study of a small African American church in Brooklyn, a revision of the author's PhD dissertation, is exceptionally well organized. Sociologist Marina highlights what he sees as "exotic" aspects of Pentecostal worship, and is most interested in the processes of religious conversion, which he relates to speaking in tongues. The Digital Coloniality of Power

Epistemic Disobedience in the Social Sciences and the Legitimacy of the Digital Age

By Alexander I. Stingl, Leuphana University

This book makes trouble: it explores the reality that digital culture is largely an extension of an older coloniality of power of the global north. It suggests a line of inquiry for the social sciences to reflect on their own imperial role and develop a contemporary critical and pragmatic scope, shifting their gaze from problems to opportunities.

Solidarity

Theory and Practice

Edited by Arto Laitinen, University of Tampere, and Anne Birgitta Pessi, University of Helsinki

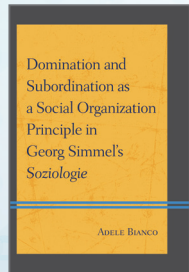

This book brings together philosophers, social psychologists, and social scientists to approach contemporary social reality from the viewpoint of solidarity. It examines the nature of different kinds of solidarity and assesses the normative and explanatory potential of the concept. The evolution of norms of solidarity is examined both via the natural evolution of the human "social brain" and via the institutional changes in legal constitutions and contemporary work life.

Ethics in an Age of Savage Inequalities

By James J. Winchester, Georgia College and State University

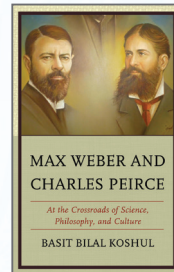

Within the United States alone, almost fifteen percent of the population lives in poverty. Ethics in an Age of Savage Inequalities investigates what moral obligations the middle class might have to the poor. Looking at extraction of minerals and the plight of service workers in the United States among many other things, this book demonstrates how the middle class benefits from the exploitation of the poor and harms the environment in ways that threaten people in poverty.

Urbanizing Carescapes of Hong Kong

Two Systems, One City

By Shu-Mei Huang, National Taiwan University

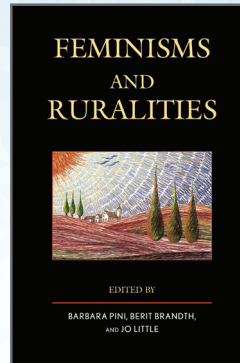

Drawing upon the massive redevelopment catalyzed by the government-led urban renewal in Hong Kong in the past two decades, Shu-Mei Huang recharges the story of post-colonial Hong Kong through care, displacement, and how care is displaced in urban governance. Theorizing “carescapes” as a heuristic device, Huang tracks how care is displaced, undervalued and even exploited in transforming urban landscape.

Japan's Responses to the March 2011 Disaster

Our Inescapable In-between

By Michael C. Brannigan, College of Saint Rose

Japan's Responses to the March 2011 Disaster

Japan's March 11, 2011 triple horror of earthquake, tsunami, and nuclear meltdown is its worst catastrophe since Hiroshima and Nagasaki. This book uncovers the pivotal role of longstanding cultural worldviews and their impact on responses to this gut-wrenching disaster. Through unpacking the pivotal notion in Japanese ethics of aidagara, or "in-betweenness," it offers testament to a deep-rooted sense of community. Accounts from survivors, victims' families, key city officials, and volunteers reveal a remarkable fiber of moral grit and resilience that sustains Japan's common struggle to rally and carve a future with promise and hope.

Ten Years after Katrina

Critical Perspectives of the Storm's Effect on American Culture and Identity

Edited by Mary Ruth Marotte and Glenn Jellenik, both University of Central Arkansas

In 2005, Hurricane Katrina left an unparalleled trail of physical destruction. Details of the devastation were quickly reported—and misreported—by media outlets, and a slew of articles and books followed, offering a spectrum of sociopolitical commentaries and analyses. But beyond the reportage and the commentary, a series of fictional and creative accounts of the Katrina-experience have emerged in various mediums. This book offers a critical processing of the newly emerging and diverse canon of Katrina texts.

Rethinking Disaster Recovery

A Hurricane Katrina Retrospective

Edited by Jeannie Haubert, Winthrop University

Rethinking Disaster Recovery focuses attention on the social inequalities that existed on the Gulf Coast before Hurricane Katrina and how they have been magnified or altered since the storm. With a focus on social axes of power such as gender, sexuality, race, and class, this book tells new and personalized stories of recovery that help to deepen our understanding of the disaster. These insights into the day-to-day lives of survivors over the past ten years help illuminate the complex disaster recovery process and provide key lessons for all-too-likely future disasters.

Mennonite Disaster Service

Building a Therapeutic Community after the Gulf Coast Storms

By Brenda Phillips, Ohio University, Chillicothe

In the aftermath of a traumatic disaster, Mennonite Disaster Service arrives to help. Established in 1950, associated volunteers have gone into devastated communities to pick up debris, muck out homes, and launch rebuilding efforts. These volunteer efforts have succeeded in building more than homes, however. Called the "therapeutic community" by disaster researchers, acts of volunteerism can generate healing moments. Based on five years of volunteer work by Mennonite Disaster Service, this volume demonstrates best practices for those who seek to do the same.

Romanians in Western Europe

Migration, Status Dilemmas, and Transnational Connections

By Remus Gabriel Anghel, Babes-Bolyai University

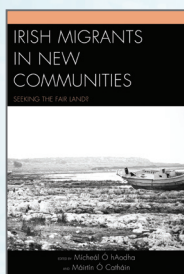

"By using statistical evidence, oral histories, and migration theories, Anghel offers a valuable study of ethnic Germans migrating from Romania to Germany and of Romanian migrants to Italy. The author analyzes the obstacles and opportunities the chosen host nations provided after the collapse of eastern European regimes and the European Union's expansion. Irish Migrants in New Communities

Seeking the Fair Land?

Edited by Mícheál Ó hAodha, University of Limerick, and Máirtín Ó Catháin, University of Central Lancashire

Irish Migrants in New Communities: Seeking the Fair Land? examines the interactions of Irish migrants and the new societies and experiences that opened up to them through the process of emigration and exile. The contributors' chapters focus on oral history perspectives to examine the adaptation of the migrants to these new environments and cultures and to chronicle the experience of "Irishness" outside of Ireland itself.

Suburban Crossroads

The Fight for Local Control of Immigration Policy

By Thomas J. Vicino, Northeastern University

"This book expands knowledge of immigration policy at the local level. Studying campaigns to pass Illegal Immigration Relief Ordinances (IIROs) in Carpentersville, Illinois; Farmers Branch, Texas; and Hazleton, Pennsylvania, Vicino finds that substantial demographic change and suburban decline are features common to all three. . . . Vicino does a nice job of describing how immigration and immigrants came to be perceived as a problem in each city. Recommended." —CHOICE

Racial Spoils from Native Soils

How Neoliberalism Steals Indigenous Lands in Highland Peru

By Arthur Scarritt, Boise State University

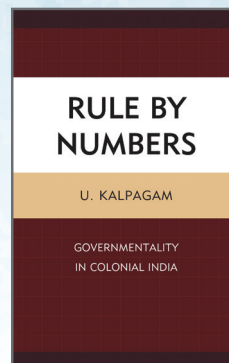

This book explains how one man swindled his Andean village twice. This is not a story about hapless isolation or cruel individuals. Rather, this is a story about racism, about the normal operation of society that continuously results in indigenous peoples' impoverishment and dependency. This book explains how the institutions created for the purpose of exploiting Indians during colonialism have been continuously revitalized over the centuries despite innovative indigenous resistance and epochal changes, such as the end of the colonial era itself.

Rule by Numbers

Governmentality in Colonial India

By U. Kalpagam, University of Allahabad

This book examines aspects of the production of statistical knowledge as part of colonial governance in India using Foucault's ideas of "governmentality." The different chapters engage with how enumerative technologies of rule led to proliferating measurements and classifications as fields and objects came within the purview of modern governance rendering both statistical knowledge and also new ways of acting on objects and new discourses of governance and the nation. The postcolonial implications of colonial governmentality are examined with respect to both planning techniques for attainment of justice and the role of information in the constitution of neoliberal subjects.

Reconciling and Rehumanizing Indigenous-Settler Relations

An Applied Anthropological Perspective

By Nadia Ferrara, Department of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada

Reconciling and Rehumanizing Indigenous-Settler Relations presents a unique and honest account of an applied anthropologist's experience in working with Indigenous peoples of Canada. It illustrates Dr. Nadia Ferrara's efforts in reconciliation and rehumanization, showing that it is all about recognizing our shared humanity. In this self-reflective narrative, the author describes her personal experience of marginalization and how it contributed to a more in-depth understanding of how others are marginalized, as well as the fundamental sense of belongingness and connectedness.

The Intersection of the Frontier, Masculinity, and Whiteness in Native American Mascot Representations

By Michael Taylor, Independent Scholar

CHOICE Outstanding Academic Title

"Careful. Deliberate. Thoughtful. Nuanced. Revealing. Anthropologist and Native American studies scholar Taylor delivers an important contribution with this artfully crafted examination of Native American mascots. His analytical skill resituates the debate about how Native Americans are represented in the broader US culture in a multilayered discussion connecting gender, race, and place, noting how Native voices are opposed to, defend against, and are drowned out by a white majority intent on reinforcing the boundaries between the conquered and the conquerors. Edited by Natalie J. Doyle, Monash University, and Lorenza Sebesta, University of Bologna

This book offers a new framework for comparing experiences of integration: regionalization must be reinterpreted as an aspect of modernization, modernization unfolding also at the local, national, and global levels. The contributors discuss how and why the different visions of modernity that inform modernization projects encouraged the construction (or rejection) of regional integration, at different times and in different places.

Chinese Models of Development

Global, Local, and Comparative Perspectives

Edited by Tse-Kang Leng, National Chengchi University, and Yu-Shan Wu, National Taiwan University

Discussion of the "Chinese Model" abounds with the rise of China. This volume analyzes the Chinese case in a theoretical framework, provides an evolutionary perspective, and compares it with other models of development. Instead of focusing on one specific case, the book's contributors shed light on the application of theories of international relations, comparative politics, and development studies to the topic under deliberation.

Student Politics in Communist Poland

Generations of Consent and Dissent

By Tom Junes, Independent Scholar

Student Politics in Communist Poland tackles the topic of student political activity under a communist regime during the Cold War. It discusses both the communist student organizations as well as oppositional, independent, and apolitical student activism during the forty-five-year period of Poland's existence as a Soviet satellite state. This book not only presents a chronological narrative of student activism, but it sheds light on lesser known aspects of modern Polish history while telling part of the life stories of prominent figures in Poland's communist establishment as well as its dissident and opposition milieu.

Minorities of Europeanization

The New Others of European Social Identity

By Hakan Ovunc Ongur, TOBB University of Economics and Technology

What are the societal effects of Europeanization? How successful is the EU's project to create an overarching European identity representative of all its citizens, transcending national boundaries, and including those previously excluded as national minorities? This study addresses these questions by adapting the Social Identity Theory's (SIT) concept of "social identity" to the discussions of "European identity," offering a novel approach that remedies previous definitional and ontological problems of the term.

Toward a Multicultural Configuration of Spain

Local Cities, Global Spaces

Edited by Ana Corbalán, University of Alabama, and Ellen Mayock, Lee University

This collection of essays explores cultural phenomena that are shaping global identities in contemporary Spain. This volume is comprised of twenty essays that examine literary, documentary, and film representations of the multicultural configurations of Spain. All of the essays treat multiculturalism in Spain, focusing on reconfigured Spanish cities and neighborhoods through Latin American, African, and/or Eastern European migrations and cultures. Together, the essays offer a compelling portrait of the changing face of contemporary Spain.

The Mythologies of Capitalism and the End of the Soviet Project

By Olga Baysha, National Research University Higher School of Economics

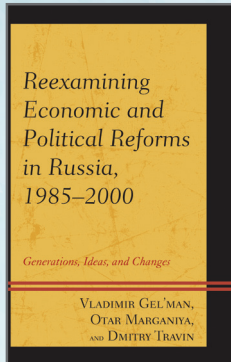

This book shows that in order to understand popular disillusionment with democratization, liberalization, and other transformations associated with the attempts of non-Western societies to appropriate the ideas of Western modernity, one must consider how these ideas are mythologized in the course of such appropriations. Baysha argues that the seeds of popular post-revolutionary frustration should be sought in pre-revolutionary discourses on democracy, liberalism, and other concepts of Western modernity that are produced outside local contexts and introduced through the channels of global communication and the interpretations of politicians, activists, and experts.

Reexamining Economic and Political Reforms in Russia, 1985–2000

Generations, Ideas, and Changes

By Vladimir Gel'man, Dmitry Travin, and Otar Marganiya, all European University at St. Petersburg

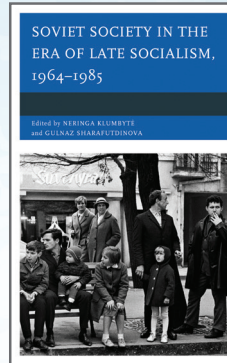

Reexamining Economic and Political Reforms in Russia, 1985–2000 analyzes the impact of generational changes and ideational changes on major political and economic reforms conducted in Russia during the late twentieth century. It examines how the policy agenda was shaped by the ideas of the generations' representatives for the "sixtiers" and "seventiers." This book explores how these differences in ideational agendas produced inconsistent and controversial outcomes from both stages of reforms.

Contemporary Middle Class in Latin America

A Study of San Felipe

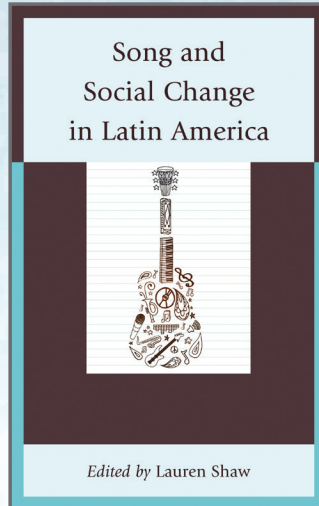

By Omar Pereyra, Pontificia Universidad Católica del Perú

In the last decades, the Latin American middle class is growing in size while becoming more heterogeneous. Sustained economic growth explains its increasing size, but behind its heterogeneity there is not only the diversification of lifestyles, but also the crystallization of a large process of upward social mobility of second and third generation migrants to capital cities and their incorporation into middle-class positions. The case of San Felipe shows that inside the contemporary middle class, a strong boundary between the “traditional middle class” and the “new middle class” permeates the everyday life of the neighborhood.

Chavez's Children

Ideology, Education, and Society in Latin America

By Manuel Anselmi, University of Perugia

Most publications on the political situation in Venezuela are journalistic and lack a scientific, and particularly sociological, approach. This book is the first sociological work on the ideological system in Venezuela. This book deals with the deep social structures of Chávez's power, its origins, its evolution in history, its dynamics, its institutionalizations, and its relationships with the educational system. By using an empirical analysis of Bolivarian schools and fieldwork on over 300 students, Chavez's Children reconstructs the history of revolutionary movements in Venezuela and advocates a model of analysis on Latin American socio-revolutionary phenomena. This English language edition will be a great opportunity for Latin American experts as well as interested readers to uncover the system behind Chávez's power.

The Political Philosophy of Chief Obafemi Awolowo

By Olayiwola Abegunrin, Howard University

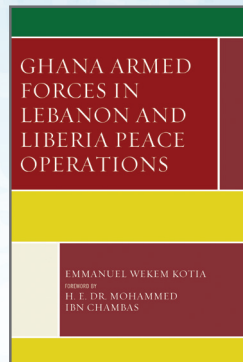

This book examines the political and economic philosophy of Chief Jeremiah Oyeniyi Obafemi Awolowo and his concepts of democratic socialism (Liberal Democratic Socialism). It studies how Chief Awolowo and his political parties, first the Action Group (AG) 1951-1966 and later the Unity Party of Nigeria (UPN) 1978-1983, acted in various Nigerian political settings. Chief Awolowo was a principled man, who by a Spartan self-discipline and understanding of himself, his accomplishments, failures and successes, was a fearless leader.

Ghana Armed Forces in Lebanon and Liberia Peace Operations

By Emmanuel Wekem Kotia, Independent Scholar

Africa Nations have contributed to peace operations in conflict zones across the world since the deployment of the United Nations Operations in the Congo in 1960. While Ghana has long been an active contributor to peace operations, there are few or no comparative studies that systematically analyze the actual roles played by troops in many of the different conflict context where they have served. This book therefore, focuses on a comparison of two peace operations undertaken by the forces of an African Nation in two different missions in Lebanon and Liberia.

Imagining the United States of Africa

Discourses on the Way Forward

Edited by E. Ike Udogu, Appalachian State University

This book frames the debates around the pressing desire for some form of unification that found expression in the pan-Africanist movement and formation of the Organization of African Unity in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia in 1963 following the advent of home-rule for many former colonies of the Western powers. Discussions in this volume address fundamental issues including nationalism and political integration and how the contradictions between both philosophies can be resolved and the recommendation of social democracy as the genre of democracy suitable for a proposed United States of Africa.

African Immersion

American College Students in Cameroon

By Julius A. Amin, University of Dayton

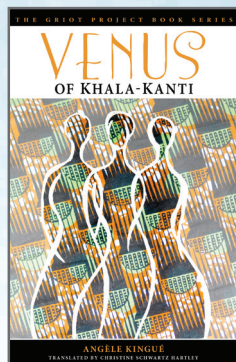

Based on previously unused primary sources including extensive interviews in Cameroon, personal journals, diaries, responses to questionnaires, and a variety of secondary sources, this study is a critical analysis of US study abroad programs in Africa. Using the University of Dayton Cameroon Immersion program as a case study, the work examines different aspects of experiential learning including selection, orientation, activities of US college students in Cameroon, post-immersion meetings, and impact of program.

Venus of Khala-Kanti

By Angèle Kingué, Bucknell University

Venus of Khala-Kanti is a tale of life-altering loss and mystical recovery. Set in an imaginary West African village that becomes a charming cul-de-sac, the unintended consequence of a national roadwork project gone awry, the story follows characters drawn with humor, irony, and empathy. The heart of the story beats with the laughter and tears of three women. Having faced incredible hardship, they come together to build their lives anew, armed with the age-old spirit of human resilience, understanding, and tenderness.

Hip Hop and Social Change in Africa

Ni Wakati

Edited by Msia Kibona Clark, California State University, and Mickie Mwanza Koster, University of Texas at Tyler

"This work is sharply focused on a critical examination of hip-hop and social change, whether by political and social commentary or by actually changing traditions and behavior. Furthermore, the book is unique in that it blends essays written by scholars as well as by some African hip-hop artists themselves, which allows for an exploration of the topic from both academic and firsthand perspectives. Highly recommended." —CHOICE

Moroccan Women, Activists, and Gender Politics

An Institutional Analysis

By Eve Sandberg, Oberlin College, and Kenza Aqertit, Independent Scholar

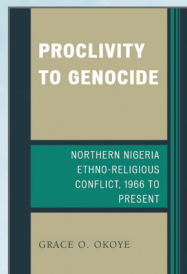

Sandberg and Aqertit analyze how, over the course of twenty-five years, dedicated, smart, and politically effective Moroccan women, working simultaneously in multiple settings and aware of each other's work, altered Morocco's entrenched gender institution of regularized practices and distinctive rights and obligations for men and women. Their work operationalizes and offers a template for studying change in national gender institutions that can be adopted by practitioners and scholars in other country settings.

Proclivity to Genocide

Northern Nigeria Ethno-Religious Conflict, 1966 to Present

By Grace O. Okoye, Independent Scholar

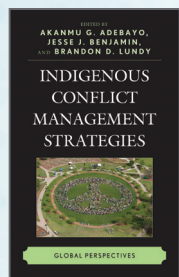

This book examines proclivity to genocide in the protracted killings that have continued for decades in the northern Nigeria ethno-religious conflict, spanning from the 1966 northern Nigeria massacres of thousands of Ibos up to the present, ongoing killings between extremist Muslims and Christians or non-Muslims in the region. It explores the ethnic and religious dimensions of the conflict and the extent to which religion foment and escalates the conflict.

Class Formations and Inequality Structures in Contemporary African Migration

Evidence from Ghana

By John A. Arthur, University of Minnesota, Duluth

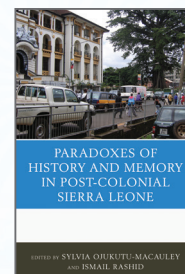

This book examines the influences of social class and inequality structures on migration in Africa using information from Ghana. From a historical and contemporary perspective, this book argues that power and class-based structural relationships are significant components in understanding how migratory diasporas shape and are shaped in turn by social class and inequality.

Identities in Crisis in Iran

Politics, Culture, and Religion

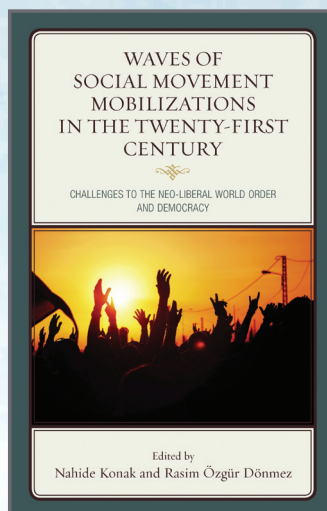

Edited by Ronen A. Cohen, Ariel University

Identities in Crisis in Iran aims at finding answers to the questions about the puzzling character of the Iranian identity. The contributors acknowledge that identity, especially when it is faced with fundamental tensions as in the case of Iran, is a phenomenon that is constantly developing via factors involving the private self and common social components. This book addresses the tension many Iranian people face that lie between the Persian culture and the Shi'a religion, women versus men, and culture versus traditions.

Waves of Social Movement Mobilizations in the Twenty-First Century

Challenges to the Neo-Liberal World Order and Democracy

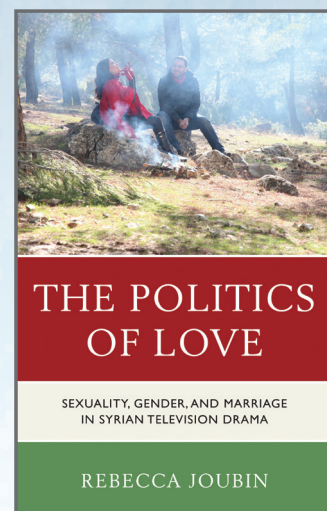

Edited by Nahide Konak and Rasim Özgür Dönmez, both Abant İzzet Baysal University

Based on case studies, this book analyzes a recent wave of social movement and protests in the twenty-first century. It has two overarching broadly defined themes: first, to identify commonalities across the social movements and protests in terms of strategies, desire, hopes as well as the main factors in the decline of the movements. And second, to underline the significance of the general economic, social, and political conditions in which these protests arose. From Turkey to Spain, Greece to Mexico, and the Netherlands to the U.S., this book observes that the "outsiders" of the system resist against the oppression of the neo-liberal world system.

The Politics of Love

Sexuality, Gender, and Marriage in Syrian Television Drama

By Rebecca Joubin, Davidson College

Dramatic miniseries are the primary arena for the expression of postcolonial Syrian culture and artistic talent, an arena that unites diverse aspects of artisanship in a struggle over visions of the past, present, and future of the nation.

Through research fueled by a viewing of over 250 miniseries ranging from the 1960s to the present—as well as an examination of hundreds of press reports, Facebook pages, and extensive interviews with drama creators—this book turns away from the dominant paradigm that focuses on regime intent.

Environmental Justice and Activism in Indianapolis

By Trevor K. Fuller, SUNY, Oneonta

Environmental justice is a complex concept that cannot be simply illustrated by maps or calculated quantitatively. By analyzing the responses and activist—or inactive—efforts of citizens to environmental injustice, this book provides a deeper interrogation of how the injustice runs deep in historical terms. In addition, Fuller analyzes how political and economic forces not only shape the distribution of hazards, but also influence—positively or negatively—the scope and effectiveness of citizens' responses.

Television and the Self

Knowledge, Identity, and Media Representation

Edited by Kathleen M. Ryan, University of Colorado, and Deborah A. Macey, Saint Louis University

"The strength of Television and the Self is its effort to create conversation across and within areas of television studies, theoretically, thematically, and methodologically. . . . Television and the Self speaks to multiple perspectives, inviting readers to consider the ways in which our own identities, values, and everyday lives have been shaped and molded, influenced and informed, by our engagement with televisual narratives."

The Culture and Philosophy of Ridley Scott

By Adam Barkman and Ashley Barkman, both, Redeemer University College, and Nancy Kang, University of Baltimore

This book assembles the critical essays of scholars working in the fields of philosophy, literary studies, and cultural studies. While not discounting the production team, auteur theory recognizes the seminal role of the director as the nucleus of the meaning-making process. With Ridley Scott an active and prolific presence in the entertainment industry today, the timeliness of this volume is optimal.

A Destiny of Choice?

New Directions in American Consumer History

Edited by David Blanke, Texas A&M University, and David Steigerwald, The Ohio State University

In A Destiny of Choice?, Blanke and Steigerwald bring together important scholarship on the tension between two leading interpretations of modern American consumer culture. That modern consumerism reflects the social, cultural, economic, and political changes that accompanied the country's transition from a local, producer economy dominated by limited choices and restricted credit to a national consumer marketplace based on the individual selection of mass-produced, mass-advertised, and mass-distributed goods.

The Pedagogy of Pop

Theoretical and Practical Strategies for Success

Edited by Edward A. Janak, University of Wyoming, and Denise F. Blum, Oklahoma State University

"Highly recommended." —CHOICE

Media competes with public schools in terms of student engagement and time. However, the two needn't be mutually exclusive. The Pedagogy of Pop: Theoretical and Practical Strategies for Success discusses a variety of strategies and approaches for using social and mass media as tools through which teachers might improve schooling

Asian Popular Culture

New, Hybrid, and Alternate Media

Edited by John A. Lent, Independent Scholar, and Lorna Fitzsimmons, California State University, Dominguez Hills

"This volume, an eclectic set of eight essays by an array of scholars and popular media specialists, covers Japan, China, South Korea, and Australia. What links these essays methodologically is the claim of interdisciplinarity with a focus on, to quote from the publisher's website, 'the roles popular culture plays in the construction of national and regional identity.' Recommended." —CHOICE

Repairing the Athlete's Image

Studies in Sports Image Restoration

Edited by Joseph R. Blaney and Lance Lippert, both Illinois State University, and Scott J. Smith, Independent Scholar

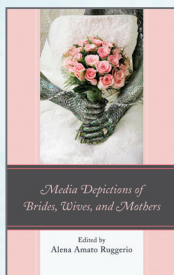

"In this ambitious... collection of twenty case studies, scholars (most from U.S. institutions) use William Benoit's theory of image restoration to analyze the image-repair discourse employed by sports figures and organizations. Blaney, Lippert, and Smith organize the collection according to the nature of the controversy (e.g., drugs) surrounding the individual in each case study. Recommended."

Edited by Alena Amato Ruggerio, Southern Oregon University

"The editor's aim is to offer current research on how media perpetuate[s] gender stereotypes... The scholarship is impressive, and the seventeen chapters do sweep anew over Kate Gosselin, Desperate Housewives, Sarah Palin's grizzly bear mamas, Mad Men women, et al. Recommended."

Coarseness in U.S. Public Communication

By Philip Dalton, Hofstra University, and Eric Mark Kramer, University of Oklahoma

"Dalton and Kramer argue that public discourse in the United States has become increasingly and dangerously coarser, due to market logic that 'has us communicating instrumentally, modeling computers, seeking efficacy and efficiency, all at the expense of both the relationships of which we are aware and the neglected binds we have with strangers.' Recommended."

Mad Men, Women, and Children

Essays on Gender and Generation

Edited by Heather Marcovitch and Nancy Batty, both Red Deer College

As rich and complex as The Sopranos or The Wire, Mad Men demands a critical look at its narrative and characters. Mad Men, Women, and Children focuses on women and children, two groups that are not only identified together in this period but are also two groups who are beginning to gain political and social rights in this period.

Death Metal and Music Criticism

Analysis at the Limits

By Michelle Phillipov, University of Tasmania

Death metal is one of popular music's most extreme variants, and is typically viewed as almost monolithically nihilistic, misogynistic, and reactionary. Through an analysis of death metal's sonic and lyrical extremity, Phillipov shows how violence and aggression can be configured as sites for pleasure and play in death metal music, with little relation to the "real" lives of listeners.

Digination

Identity, Organization, and Public Life in the Age of Small Digital Devices and Big Digital Domains

By Robert C. MacDougall, Curry College

"Digination's core premise is that technology impacts everyone in many ways—socially, culturally, politically, and psychologically. Through a media ecologist's lens, MacDougall weaves theory, empirical data, and his own perspective into an account of technology and its influence on humankind... An interesting, timely analysis of the human relationship with the machine. Recommended."

ABOUT LEXINGTON BOOKS' SOCIOLOGY PROGRAM

Founded in 1970, Lexington Books now serves as Rowman & Littlefield's imprint for publishing specialized new works by established and emerging scholars, with a critically acclaimed list of high-quality academic works that make a significant contribution to today's scholarship. At a time when many publishers are cutting back on publishing monographs and edited collections, Lexington Books is dramatically expanding its program, including its list in Sociology.

EDITORIAL SUBMISSIONS

Lexington Books is currently reviewing new manuscript proposals in Sociology. To submit a proposal for consideration, please send a prospectus, a detailed table of contents, one or two sample chapters, and your curriculum vitae. If you are proposing a contributed volume, please include titles/affiliations for each of the contributors, and we would accept chapter abstracts in lieu of sample chapters. Please do not send your entire manuscript. An acquisitions editor will contact you to request additional materials. The prospectus should include the following:

1. A description of the book, what makes it unique, and why you are qualified to write it.
2. A description of your target audience (undergraduate or graduate students? scholars? professionals?).
3. An analysis of competing or similar books (including publishers and dates).
4. A list of courses in which your book might be used as a text or supplementary text.
5. An indication of whether any part of your manuscript has been published previously, and if it is a doctoral dissertation, what changes you are proposing to prepare it for publication.
6. The length of the manuscript in 12-point type on double-spaced 8 1/2" by 11" pages.
7. If the manuscript is not complete, an estimation of when it will be finished.
8. An indication of whether the manuscript is under consideration by other publishers.

Please email your proposal to:

BStone@Rowman.com or LexingtonBooks@Rowman.com or mail it to:
